Workshop Description: (.3 CEU PS) In this hands-on workshop, participants will develop an understanding of the needs of young consumers and lay a foundation for the skills, vocabulary, and attitudes needed to serve children in a variety of interpreting settings. There are very few resources available in the field of interpreting on this subject, and much of what is available focuses exclusively on educational settings. This workshop focuses on the broad range of settings where interpreters work with children.

Topics covered include:

- How interpreting for children differs from interpreting for adults
- Vocabulary specific to settings with children
- Basic overview of child development, with a focus on linguistic features of each stage
- Important linguistic considerations when interpreting for children
- Ethical considerations for working with children

At the end of this workshop, participants will be able to:

- 1) Give a basic description of the stages of child development.
- 2) Explain how these stages influence the interpreter’s role at each stage.
- 3) Demonstrate at least 10 ASL signs commonly found in settings involving children.
- 4) List at least 3 special considerations the interpreter must make when working with children in non-educational settings

- ✓ Content level/target audience for workshop is little to none. Recommended for anyone interpreters who are interested in working with children.
- ✓ If you need any accommodations contact Dr. Rebecca Minor at rminor3@ccbcmd.edu
- ✓ Cancellation policy: in the event of cancelation the event will be rescheduled.

Presenter Bios

Kathy MacMillan has worked with both deaf and hearing children in many different capacities throughout her professional life: as a children's librarian, as a school librarian at the Maryland School for the Deaf, as a camp counselor and director with Deaf Camps, Inc., as an interpreter, and as a signing storyteller with Stories By Hand. Kathy holds NIC Certification from RID, as well as a Master of Library Science from the University of MD, College Park. Kathy reviews interpreter resource materials for RID's VIEWS, and is the author of several storytime resource books for librarians and educators.

Louise Rollins is a teacher with Montgomery County Public Schools. She works with deaf and hard of hearing children ages birth to five and their families, and spent several years as a teacher at the Maryland School for the Deaf. Louise also volunteers as a camp counselor and director with Deaf Camps, Inc. Louise draws on her experience with the Deaf community through her parents, family members, and friends, as well as several years of interpreting in community and VRS settings. She holds a BA in Early Childhood Education from Towson University and an MA in Deaf Education, with a concentration in Family Centered Early Education, from Gallaudet University.
